AMATEUR NAVAL RESERVE

THE GENTLEMEN OF THE TACHT CLUBS TO PERPARE FOR WAR.

Scheme to Enrell Tachtemen in Classes to be Trained for Raval Service in Case of Reed, and to Give Them East. The Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club began early in February last to consider the stablishment of a naval reserve. in which amateur yachtamen and the trained sailors o ur pleasure fleets would be important factors. A stimulus was given to the club's interest in the subject by the receipt of a letter, hitherto unpublished, from Bear-Admiral Gherardi, Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, in response to a letter from Becretary L. F. d'Oremisulx, containing the report of a special com-mittee of the club, in which he says:

The long delay has so reduced our strength affoat that has ships that have been authorised to be built, though resming an increase, scarcely make good the dedoisney grasted during the past few years by the decay and withdrawal from source service of the many weeden vessels built to meet the exigencies of the late war, and give adequate employment to our officers and 8,000 enisted men and apprentices now constituting our naval strength. These new vessels differ from the old in being listed men and apprentices now constituting our naval strength. These new vessels differ from the eld in being full-powered steamships, some with rig and spars, to carry a fair spread of canvas, the majority, however, fitted with only military masts, with electric lights and machine guns in the tops. This change of rig and armanent can in no way affect that very essential quality of the men.e. wars-man, seamanship, and the problem that we will have to meet in case of another war-not an improbable occurrence, will be how to recruit the navy with capable seamen.

The only available body of men, it seems to me, cut-side the fasting and coasting fleets, are our amateur estiers, the gentlemen of the yaoth clubs, who would form a body of intelligent and efficient officers. Your valuntary enrollment as a naval reserve, with the exemptions and rules similar to those accorded to the militia of the several States, would grove a service of the greatest maritime strength to the Government in the case of war. Your proficiency in seamanship and general nantical knowledge would render your instruction. By the officers of the navy, in the many duttee on hoard an armed vessel, an easy and agreeable tastilarly fait in organizing of nariy every nationality had been a seconsplained, your value would. The case accomplished, your value would not only provides for the personnel of a reserve, but makes a laudable effort to encourage the building of commercial ships by granting a subsidy, under prescribed conditions, that will be capable of carrying an armament and rendering valuable assistance in case of need. Efforts in this direction must be largely centrelied by politics, in which the officers of the new take little or no part, from force of circumstances due to a continual change of residence and extended absence en duty shroad.

C. H. Leland words a letter to the Segreyacht cinb will press the establishment of the Naval Reserve upon the attention of the public with vigor.

Mr. C. H. Leland wrote a letter to the Secretary of the Navy on the same day that Commandant Gherardi addressed the club, He said, among other things:

After having for the past sixteen years successfully inculcated the lesson of Corinthianism, or the handling and personal control of yachts by their owners and the training of amateurs as working crew, its efforts are now directed to a more extended range, including the theory and practice of designing and constructing, seamanship and navigation. With the hope that the idea of festering in its early beginnings a movement which may be the nucleus for a millist of the seas it a, the training and technical education of an intelligent volunteer force) may commend itself to you, and that you may find it in year power to give this movement is initial impose through its Seawanhank Club by the detail from time to time of competent naval officers as instructors either in theory ashore or in practice as a law taken the liberty of submitting this report of correctional consideration that the club mey have the moral support which your approval would give.

Secretary Whitney, said, in answer to Mr.

lawe taken the liberty of submitting this report to your consideration that the dub may have the moral support which your approval would give.

Becretary Whitney said, in answer to Mr. Leiand, under date of March 10, acknowledging the receipt of the report of the special committee of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club, that any method of forming a reserve which can be called upon to rednforce the regular navy in time of need would receive the encouragement and moral support of the Department and of the naval service at large. Secretary Whitney stated, further, that it would probably be practicable to detail officers to instruct members of the club in naval architecture, the management and navigation of ships of war, gunnery, and the use of torpedoes, and as a preliminary a representative of the Navy Department would be sent to New York to confer with the committee as to the best methods of attaining this end.

Commander B. H. McCalla was detailed from Washington, and met a committee of the club consisting of Massra, A. Cass Capfield J. F. Tams, and L. F. d'Oremieulz, Lieut-Commander Chenery, United States Navy, was subsequently added. The committee concluded, from the discussions, that the whole scheme should be not of an honorary, but of an essentially utilitarian character, in order to obtain the dignity and value necessary to insure its success; that yachtsmen enrolled in a naval reserve should form a distinct and separate class, and be fitted to serve in positions of authority; that the inducements and rewards should be worthy and valuable; and that the needs and representation of all sections of the yachting public should be considered.

Pursuant of the advice of Commander McCalls the committee, through Mr. J. F. Tams, sent a letter to Senator W. C. Whitthorne of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, who had presented a bill to create a naval reserve as the last assession of Congress. Portions of this letter follow:

gross. Portions of this letter follow:

The members of the club have watched with the keenest interest your efforts toward establishing a naval reserve from which, in time of chiergency, the Government could draw a body of comparatively well-trained officers and men to man our vessels of war in a supplemental or auxiliary capacity, and they have carefully followed the progress of the bill introduced by you in the last Congress to this end. They have for some time been considering the same subject from the yachtsman's standpoint, and a specifical committee, consisting of Mesers. A. Cass Canfield, L. F. d'Oremieuix, and the undersigned. Was appointed to take the matter in charga.
Our object in addressing you is to call your attention in furtherance of the object you have in yiew First-fo the possibilities of a field to draw from in the yachtsman of the United States and their vessels;
and

the rachtsmen of the United States and their vessels; and solid Second—The fishermin and the members of the life saving service, each of which might form, as is the case in Great Britain, a valuable division as branches of the main system. Several millions of dollars are invessed in yachts on the Atlantic and Pacific coast and on the lakes, and employment is given to a large body of seafaring men under discipline fashioned after that in force on our vessels of war, and it only needs training in the handling of guns and in the routine on a vessel of war to make them an efficient body of officers or of men, as the case may be applied to the same and more or less familiar with the coast and harbors from Eastport, Me., to the Gulf of Mexico. We speak for those on the Atlantic coast, and have no doubt the same statement holds good in the case of the yachtsmen of the lakes and of the Pacific coast, and are rapable of navigating vessels in the waters mentioned. Rearly all of those who ewn vessels command in person, and some hold master's certificates of competency all over the world.

Senator Whithorne, in his letter to the committee, asked for an estimate of the number likely, in the event of the adoption of a naval reserve policy, to be enrolled as membera. The committee suggested that the reserves derivable from the mercantile marine (the subject of Mr. Whithorne's bill) should be designated as the Mercantile Naval Reserve, and that the new classes, composed of the fishermen, life-saving corps. &c., should be called the Coast Defence Naval Reserve, and the yachtsmen the Naval Reserve volunteers. The principal suggestions of the committee in regard to the formation of the last-mentioned class are as follows:

THE LIVELY FIGHT SOME SPORTS SAW ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

he Kingsbridge Paverite Makes a Game Fight, But the New Yorker was Tee Much For Him—An Exetting Contect.

The deck hands on the Thirty-fourth street ferry boat Flushing, looked with suspicion Wednesday night on three coaches containing some flashily dressed sports, THE SUN'S sporting reporter, a New York Athletic Club man, and an unshaven individual who held a lithebodied, black dog, carefully muzzled and blanketed, as tenderly as if the creature had ust swallowed a dynamite cartridge. The members of the party sauntered carelessly to office, and tried not to head the longing glances of the hard-worked train men who knew well enough what was going on. A few stations down the road and a similar party boarded the train with a yellow bull terrier, just as carefully blanketed and muzzled as was dog No. 1. All got off at a flag station. A short drive in a half dozen coaches which were in waiting and a little hotel was reached, on the top floor of which was a long eliptical dog pit. It looked high, and it was sixteen feet in length by nine chalked on the floor at each end of it. These chalked marks were the scratch lines. The dogs. Danger from Kingsbridge, a yellow brindle of surprising beauty, and Towney, a black New York dog, were to battle for $500 a side and the entire net gate receipts. The pets were to fight at twenty-five pounds, and as soon as both had been scaled and found not to exceed this limit they were brought on.

The handlers had tossed to see which should show and wash first, and it fell to Towney. His master brought him in his arms through the small crowd of "safe" sports who had paid $5 apiece to be present. A big tub of water had been placed in the centre, and the Ethiopian gladiator was stood in it and carefully which the was been to the took the water in which he was being washed in their mouths and spat it out. This was to prove they had not "rubbed" him with any kind of poison. Towney was rubbed dry with towels, and his backers held him in his corner behind a blanket while Danger was put through the same tests. A time-keeper and a referce were chosen, and the exciting moment came when the latter called out. "Are you ready?"

The dogs were held by their seconds with the greatest difficulty. They licked their chops and barked merrily while struggling to get at each other. Both were in perfect condition; white fangs, red tongues, flashing eyes, and braked merrily while struggling to get at each other. Both were in perfect condition; white fangs, red tongues, flashing eyes, and grace of serpents proved it.

"Let go."

With a yelp of delight the thoroughbreds met in the centre. Any one who has seen a whirlwind in the street catch up two sheets of paper, whirl them around and around, and plek them up and throw them down again can have a faint idea of what the collision looked like. The dogs stood upon which had hen Towney's the control of the c secured it in three minutes after Towney had done some very severe punishing, and it was the black dog's turn to go across the pit. He did it with a rush, and Danger's backers would have hedged out at big odds if they could. Ten minutes more of cutting down for Towney and up-hill but game and scientific fighting on the part of the yellow brindle, and another "turn" was secured. Danger was badly cut up, and there was plenty of betting that he wouldn't scratch. He couldn't get more than a quarter of the way to his enemy's corner when he fell from weakness, and the referee gave Towney the battle.

The American Turf Congress. LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 10,-Representatives of the various Western associations met in special session in this city yesterday to hold the fifth annual meeting of the American Turf Congress. All the clubs were represented either by delegates or by proxy, with the exception of the Memphis and the Nashville Associations. Those represented in person were Louisville, Covington, Chicago, New Orleans, Lexington, and St. Louis, Kansas City and Minneapolls having sent proxies, they being applicants for admission as members in the congress. The work accomplished to-day consisted principally of revising the racing rules, the most important change made being the adoption of a rule forcing pool sellers to sell the horse owned by one man and starting in the same race as a stable, instead of separately, as has been the custom heretofore. At the evening session the only important business acted upon was the carrying of a resolution refusing to ravoke the lockey license.

The Congress adjourned to-day. Charles Green of St. Louis was elected President; B. G. Bruce of Lexington, Secretary, and O. L. Bradley of Lexington. Treasurer. Kansas City was elected a member of the Congress, and it was decided, in the matter of paid judges, to leave that question for each association to determine on for themselves. New Orleans was chosen as the next place to hold the meeting of the Congress, which the President is to call on the first Monday in November, 1888.

The dates of these meetings were not finally settled upon, but in all probability the Lexington meeting will begin on the first Saturday in May, the others coming after with not over two days intervention. Closely Connected to a Royal Family, Reared LOUISVILLE, Nov. 10 .- A remarkable career was closed with the death yesterday of Mrs. Kate Murphy Anderson. Born of parents closely connected to a royal family, reared in luxury, taught by masters, and graduated from one of the great academies of Europe with high honors, a young lady full of promise and the prospect of a bright future, married to wealth, and at last an old woman, dead in a scantlly furnished, dark, and gloomy room, almost a pauper. Life would have gone out and no one near to hear these words whispered with the last breath, "All is over now," but for the presence of one by chance. Kate Murphy was born in Dublin, Ireland, on Nov. 8, 1835-one of two daughters of Sir John Murphy, who christened his child after an unmarried sister much older than himself. McCabe, and to them was born an only daugh-McCabe, and to them was born an only daughter, who became the Countess Doramon, and the other Countess Gherardesi, the husband of the latter being a descendant of Dantes. Ugoline, the other countess Gherardesi, the husband of the latter being a descendant of Dantes. Ugoline, the other sister of Murphy, became the wife of John liyan, once a prominent leather merchant of Louisville. In 1873 Murphy separated from his wife, but not until his daughter had finished school. He remained in the country, his wife and two daughters coming to America, where both the girls were soon married, Kate becoming the wife of a wealthy citizen of New Orleans in July, 1854. Anderson died in August, 1857, possessed of quite an estate, leaving a young widow and little daughter. The child was burned to death while the mother was at church, about two months after the husband and father died. Remaining in New Orleans until airer the war, she came to Louisville, and found a home with her uncle, John Ryan. At his death in 1882 she was left alone, and a little later purchased a home on Walnut street, near First, where she lived until her death. During the past few years she has been addicted to drinking to excess, but when on a spree always closeled horself in her room. The habit so fastened itself upon her that her property went from her, and then followed a mortgage on the home, which, only a few days aco, was foreclosed, and notice to vacate the premises given. Although only 52 years old, she had the appearance of one much older. She was an excellent linguist, speaking fluently English, French, German, and Irish. ter, who became the wife of Joseph Fisher of THURSDAY, Nov. 10. Reading led in the market to-day, a movement the reverse of that of yesterday. This movement was not as pronounced in Reading as was the advance of yesterday, and it was accomplished rejuctantly. Throughout the rest of the list the decline was, as a rule, greater than yesterday's improvement. This is not surprising, considering that Reading has been the mainstay of the market for some little time. and that no reaction worthy of the name has taken place for a number of days. The course of prices was turned to-day chiefly by heavy selling for foreign account. These sales were said to be inspired by the physical condition of the Emperor and of the Crown Prince of Germany. Chicago aggravated the uneasy feeling by occasional sensational reports relative to the taking off of the Anarchists. The bears were not slow to appreciate the momentary change in their favor, and they sold quite as freely, if not more so, than any other interest. The net result was an average decline of about 1 % cont. The losses were quite uniform, though a number of the special-ties, and some of the leading stocks, notably Northwest, Lackawanna, and Bichmond Ter-minal, suffered only small fractional losses,

In point of activity the first place was still held by Reading, which supplied about the same proportion to the total volume of business as yesterday-that is, one-third. St. Paul ranked second, and Western Union third. The bears turned their attention afresh to Missouri Pacific, and still seem confident of their ability to demoralize the market with that stock, since, according to all appearances, Mr. Gould and the other large holders, if there are any, make no effort to protect it in the market. The bears have for some time been cherishing the following view regarding Missouri Pacific with the expectation of accomplishing a good deal in the market whenever its cordeal in the market whenever its cor-rectness should be proven, namely, that the Missouri Pacific, or that interest, will be unable to control the Texas Pacific after reorganization, and that the property is liable to pass into the control of its rival, the Atchison Company. So far as can be learned, there is no basis whatever for this view. In the first place, the Missouri Pacific Company will receive about $8,000,000, or one-fifth of the stock of the reorganized Texas Pacific Company. In addition, all of the interests engaged in reorganizing the property are working in accord with the Missouri Pacific interest. It would seem that, having failed to buy the property at auction yesterday, the only way for the Atchison to acquire control would be to buy it in the market. There are certainly no indications in the market that any one is acquiring any amount of the stock, nor does the market reflect the possibility of Kansas Pacific maintaining a corporate existence independent of the Missouri Pacific.

A number of rumors reflecting upon unnamed mercantile concerns were current during the day, but there was no confirmation of any of them. The stiffer rates for money were in some quarters attributed to manipulation of that market by the operators for a decline. It is doubtful, however, if there is any basis for that view. At the lower range of prices the market was steady, and became very dull and continued so to the close, when a little aufmation was imparted by a drive at prices, which left them at 3 o'clock at the lowest figures.

In the Unlated Department there was an increase in the trading in Cotton Oil Trusts at a decilne from 31% to 30 at the close, Georgia Pacific 2s acid at 45, and an odd lot of Western National Bank stock at 94.

The noteworthy changes in prices to-day are shown by the comparison of final sales:

THE LAND BOOM.

Way Up Among the Stare. Dangere to be Aveided.

It has not been confined to any one locality, for, as Chauncey M. Depew said after a visit to the West, "Al nearly every one of the trade centres we visited we found extravagant and untenable views of prospective real estate values." Of course, the vast army of mon engaged in one way or another in these enterprises were loth to believe their views either extravagant or untenable. Both they and Depaw are right to a certain extent.

Land values have rapidly and permanently in n this country in the last fifty years. This is especially oticeable in the "jumping" West, along the lines of new railroads.

Thousands of new cities have sprung up with a growth perfectly astonishing, and great fortunes have been nade in real estate.

Land values must continue to increase generally, because the available area of land in the country is now so mail as to render inevitable its entire absorption in a amail as to render inevitable its entire absorption in a few years.

One hundred years from now, at the present rate we increase, our population will be 600 to the square miletwice as many as in the largest European nations.

To be a safe speculator it is necessary to study cames and effect, as the proprietors of Warner's safe cure did in preparing their remedy. Its success is great because it reaches the cause of disease. Every drep of blood coursing through the system passes through the kidnays.
If they are in sound working order, the blood is purified;
if deranged, poison, that should be eliminated, is carried through the blood channels to every part of the system.
The poison attacks the weak points, and so come the long list of resulting aliments. Remedy the cause, put the purifying organs in health, and the whole system becomes healthy.

the puritying organs in measure.

Decomes healthy.

There must be a solid basis for a land boom, however, or it will inevitably result in a crash, entailing great losses and subsequent injurious depression.

Two thousand dollars per front foot for land in some cities might be a judicious investment, in others very inducreet. It is wise to make investments of a charac-ter indicating a permanent, if slower, growth and increase of value.
